Terminology

Some terms and phrases are repeated throughout various Qualifications and Units of Competency.

Foundation, Intermediate, Advanced

These terms are used to refer to three different levels of participant skills in the generic coaching units. The technical and tactical sport skills and knowledge relevant to each level depends on the specific sport and information is available from the relevant National Sporting Organisation.

Sport-specific

This term refers to a specific sport. The specific sport depends on the context. For example, in a netball sport context the specific sport would be netball. The term appears throughout the units to enable the units to be delivered in a broad range of specific sport contexts without the need for separate units for every sport context.

Athlete

This term is used to describe individuals who participate in sport as a job. These can be paid or volunteer job roles. The term appears in units that describe job functions performed by athletes and developing athletes.

Participant

This term is used to describe individuals who participate in sport as a community activity. The term appears in units that describe job functions performed by coaches and officials when referring to the sport participants they interact with in a community sport environment. National Sporting Organisations (NSOs) are responsible for the design and implementation of their coaching and officiating frameworks.

Participation

This term refers to the act of participating in a physical activity that is competitive and a recognised sport.

Session

This term refers to a single participant development event delivered by a coach to participants.

Program

This term refers to a series of sessions delivered by a coach to participants.

National Sporting Organisations (NSOs)

NSOs are national sporting bodies recognised by Sport Australia. A list of NSOs can be found here: https://www.sportaus.gov.au/australian_sports_directory

Workplace or simulated environment

A workplace is an environment where sport related job roles described by the draft qualifications are found. These can be paid or volunteer job roles, for example, a volunteer community coach at a local basketball club. A simulated environment can be a school or a training provider provided it reflects sport industry workplace conditions and meets the mandatory requirements specified in the assessment conditions.
